Mayor Thomas Koch on Tuesday said he would ask the City Council for $500,000 to fight the novel coronavirus epidemic and the Affordable Housing

Trust Fund Committee for $1 million to provide rent assistance for hospitality workers affected by the outbreak.

Koch has also closed municipal buildings – includ-

Sun News To Be Posted Online Until Paper Can Resume Print Editions

Due to the outbreak of the coronavirus, The Quincy Sun will not be published March 26 and April 2.

The office will close for business at the end of the day Wednesday, March 18. It plans to reopen Thursday, April 2.

The next scheduled issue is Thursday, April 9 - provided the health emergency improves over the next two weeks.

"We are heeding the message from government leaders and health officials to allow our employees to remain at home and to properly allow for 'social distancing' in an attempt to stop the spread of the coronavirus," Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth said.

"The decision to suspend publication for two weeks is unprecedented in the Sun's nearly 52-year history but necessary given the seriousness of the coronavirus epidemic," Bosworth continued. "It was a decision that was carefully weighed. We believe we are making the right call."

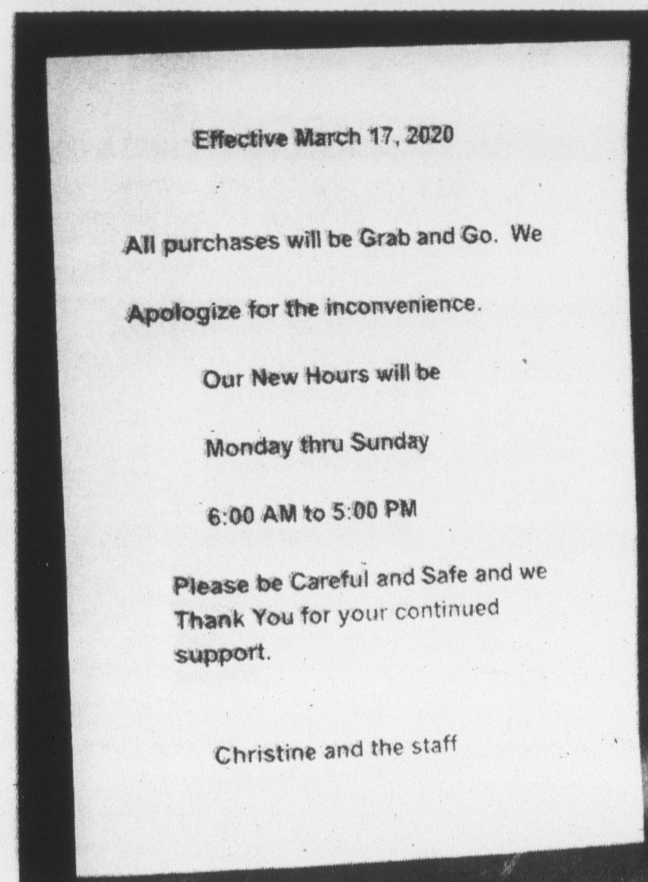

Bosworth said the Sun will continue to publish updates on the coronavirus and other news and information including obituaries on the paper's website until a normal print production schedule can resume.

The Quincy Sun website is: www.TheQuincySun.com. Accessing news on the Sun website is free to all.

"We apologize for the disruption in our print edition. We are optimistic that we can resume a normal printing schedule in a few weeks. In the interim, please continue to visit our website for pertinent news and information," Bosworth added.

SIGN OF THE TIMES – Sign posted on the front door of Gunther Tootie's food establishment on Hancock Street and other area eateries explains that due to the outbreak of the coronavirus all purchases are now "grab and go" (take out only) for the foreseeable future.

Keenan: Access To Coronavirus Testing A Concern

By SCOTT JACKSON

The ability to test individuals for the novel coronavirus is one of the top issues that officials face as they fight the pandemic in the Bay State and across the country, Sen. John Keenan said in a recent interview.

Massachusetts officials on March 10 said they had tested more than 400 individuals for the viral disease, COVID-19, since Feb. 28. Gov. Charlie Baker on March 12 said the state had secured enough kits to test another 5,000 individuals.

Keenan, who spoke to The Sun on March 12, said Baker and his colleagues across the country have pressed federal officials for better access to test kits.

"One of the biggest issues facing not only the commonwealth but the country right now is access to testing and testing kits. The state has an increased ability now to test, but it has to meet certain criteria in order to do the test," Keenan said.

"There is the desire to have the ability to do more testing through the public sector, to have our hospitals do more testing, and that has been expressed by the governor to the federal government. I think most governors have expressed the same concern. Hopefully there is going to be some more testing done."

Testing, he said, can help officials take the proper steps to limit the spread of the virus.

"Testing is important, one, to find out where your hot spots are, and to determine if there is a hot spot where there has been some exposure, what are the limits of that exposure and how far do you go as far as isolating or quarantining people that have been exposed. The second part of it is identifying those that have the coronavirus and making sure steps are taken so they don't go and spread it. So, there are at least two parts to the value of testing," Keenan said.

"The latest stat that I saw as of today is that the U.S. lags behind other countries significantly in the number of people that have been tested per capita. South Korea, which by some accounts has done a good job of containing this virus, did significantly more tests per capita than we have here in the U.S."

"Some feel that our response won't be as aggressive as it should be because we just don't have the data and there is a concern that our number of people exposed is much greater than what it is, but we just don't have the data on that and so few tests have been done here in the U.S."

The World Health Organization declared COVID-19 a pandemic on March 11. That night, President Donald Trump announced travel restrictions for a large portion of Europe, the NBA suspended its season after a player on the Utah Jazz tested positive for the virus, and Academy-Award winning actor Tom Hanks said he and his wife, Rita Wilson, had tested positive for COVID-19 while in Australia. The following day, the NHL suspended its season, baseball pushed back opening day, the NCAA cancelled numerous postseason tournaments, including March Madness, and Broadway theaters said they would be going dark for at least a month.

Keenan said there was a growing sense the outbreak could get worse before it gets better.

"I would say over the last two days, that has become more of the sentiment. I think people are starting to realize that this has the potential to be significantly worse. Most are worried about the ability of our health care delivery system to meet the demand should this disease spike pretty quickly," Keenan said.

"The idea is to distance yourselves from others - don't go to large meetings. That is why a lot of public events have been cancelled. If you distance yourselves, the theory is that the spike won't occur. The number of cases may remain the same, but they will be spread out over a longer period of time and the hospitals will be better able to handle the cases."

Locally, Keenan said the number of cases associated with an employee conference Biogen held in late February shows how readily the coronavirus can spread. Eighty-two of the 108 presumptive positive and confirmed cases of the virus in Massachusetts as of March 12 were linked to the conference.

"I think that really raised

Police Wearing, Selling Patches Supporting Autism

Autism is a complex, lifelong developmental disability that typically appears during early childhood and can impact a person's social skills, communication, relationships, and self-regulation.

On average, 1 out of every 59 children in the United States will be diagnosed with some form of Autism Spectrum Disorder.

Quincy Police announces it is joining numerous police departments across the United States in promoting Autism Awareness. For the month of April, uniformed personnel are allowed to replace the standard shoulder patch with the Quincy Police Autism Awareness Patch as a reminder of our commitment to those we serve.

Virus Concerns Close Library

The Thomas Crane Public Library has made the difficult decision to temporarily close all library locations as of Sunday, March 15 for at least two weeks, or until further notice.

In a statement released Monday, library officials said:

"TCPL is a place where the community gathers and your health and well-being is our top priority. We are closing for the safety of our visitors and staff due to heightened concerns about the spread of COVID-19. We are deeply committed to serving the public, and the best way to do that at this time is to help minimize the spread of COVID-19. This is a rapidly changing situation; please continue to check our website at <http://thomascranelibrary.org> for updates and more information."

During this temporary closure:

- All late fees and holds are suspended. Please note, this change may not be reflected immediately in library accounts.

- Please keep any materials you have currently checked out and wait until we reopen to return them. Our book drops at all locations will remain open but if a book drop is full, do not leave library items outside the book drop.

- Free wifi is available outside all library locations, in the parking lots or as far as the signal extends.

- Explore many free online resources, including ebooks, emagazines, streaming video and music for all ages. Visit <http://thomascranelibrary.org/> for details.

For COVID-19 updates, continue to check the City of Quincy website at <http://quincyma.gov>, the CDC website at <https://www.cdc.gov/coronavirus/index.html> and the state's website at <https://www.mass.gov>.

Residents with questions can call the Mayor's Office of Constituent Services at

Officials said regular library hours will return "as soon as possible."

a lot of concern with people that you could go to a conference like that and have such an immediate outbreak of the virus among a significant number of people. That really got people worried about how contagious this is," Keenan said.

In addition, the senator said the economic impact of the COVID-19 pandemic cannot underestimated.

The outbreak has caused stock prices to tumble in recent weeks. On March 12, the day of the interview, the Dow Jones Industrial Average fell 10 percent, the biggest one-day decline since Black Monday in October 1987. Trading was halted briefly on March 12 for the second time in the week and the Federal Reserve announced it would pump up to $1.5 trillion into the financial system.

"You can't understate the impact that it is having on the economy," Keenan said.

"The stock market dropped another 10 percent today at the close. They suspended trading early this morning under that trigger and then trading resumed. There was an announcement there was going to be an infusion of federal money to help the markets, the markets stabilized for a short period of time, and then my understanding is at the end of the day the markets slid again...and you have to go back to 1980-something to the last single-day drop to match this. Four out of the last six trading days have been like this."

The coronavirus outbreak, Keenan added, could wind up impacting the state's budget as well as local aid to cities and towns.

"One of the unknown sources relative to state revenues is capital gains. It's going to be a long time perhaps before we see a capital gain from a trade of stocks. This may impact housing prices, which would impact capital gains as well," he said.

"It hit me today, as I was over the cafeteria over at Ashburton Place. At the top of the steps there is a little store and oftentimes there are four or five people in there buying lottery tickets. There was nobody in line buying lottery tickets, which is a significant source of revenue for municipalities. That funds local aid. If this goes on for a month and a half or two months, what is going to happen to that? You don't think of those things. I really didn't think of that until I came up the escalator."

In response to the epidemic, Keenan said the State House was closed to visitors starting March 13. The Senate will meet in informal sessions - where only non-controversial matters can be voted on - for at least two weeks.

"For the next two weeks, the Senate will follow the process of having informal sessions. Informal sessions are sessions where only non-controversial items can be taken up and any member has the right to raise an objection. If the objection is properly raised, then the matter does not go forward," Keenan said.

ward," Keenan said.

"That is what we will be doing in terms of our sessions for the next two weeks and that is subject to change. We were told today that access to the building by the public would end tomorrow. We were also advised, consistent with the governor's directive and declaration of emergency, to do remote meetings whenever possible to avoid in-person meetings. The Senate is moving forward with that and I am making plans in my office relative to that.

"There are always a lot of advocacy days scheduled at the State House. Those have been cancelled or postponed for at least 30 days."

The staff in Keenan's office will be working remotely for the near future.

"We got word today that the State House would be closed to visitors, so we made the decision that the physical office would be closed," he said. "We have the ability to work remotely. We will have our phone lines transferred, we will have computer access, we will have teleconferencing abilities, so we really don't expect our constituent service delivery, our research and work on legislation, to be impacted to any great extent. The greatest difference will be that we will have two weeks without a formal session, or perhaps longer, but informal sessions will continue."

Keenan compared the response to the coronavirus to the winter of 2015, when the Boston region was hit with more than 110 inches of snow. He noted, however, that it is unknown when the outbreak would end.

"It's unprecedented in the sense that we don't know what is coming and so there is no definitive end right now...but in some ways, I think it is similar to what we experienced back when we had 110 inches of snow. There was a period of time when people couldn't get to work, and they were asked to work from home and work remotely. They were asked to stay off the roadways," Keenan said.

"So, in some ways, it's similar, but when you have a snowstorm and you have a lot of snow, you kind of have a sense of when we're going to get back to normal.

"Here, we just don't know when it will be back to normal."

• On March 30, 1867, U.S. Secretary of State William Seward signs a treaty with Russia to buy Alaska for $7 million. Despite the bargain price of roughly 2 cents an acre, the Alaskan purchase was ridiculed as "Seward's Folly" and "Seward's icebox."

• On March 31, 1889, the Eiffel Tower is dedicated in Paris in a ceremony presided over by Gustave Eiffel, its designer, and French Prime Minister Pierre Tirard. At 984 feet, the Eiffel Tower remained the world's tallest man-made structure until the completion of the Chrysler Building in New York in 1930.

Highrock Quincy Closing Due To COVID-19

Highrock Quincy and all 10 Highrock churches around Greater Boston will be switching to virtual services starting this Sunday due to the coronavirus.

"Community containment efforts have failed. Now the best way to serve our most vulnerable neighbors is to slow the spread of this virus so that medical facilities and professionals are not overwhelmed by more patients than they can care for. We can do this by avoiding gatherings of more than 25 people," said Pastor Dave Swaim, Highrock Network of Churches and Pastor Stephen Sharkey, Highrock Quincy, in a press release.

"While we will miss our regular gatherings, we wonder what new invitations God may be giving us in this season. Our staff team is exploring ways to connect virtually, including online Sunday services and many more new opportunities throughout the week.

"In addition, we are looking into ways that we can serve those who are impacted by either the disruptions caused by COVID-19, or by the disease itself. We are currently in talks with community leaders and medical professionals to figure out if there are ways we can bless others in this difficult time.

"Finally, we want to say THANK YOU to the many medical professionals, researchers, and community leaders who are on the front lines against this pandemic. If some of the rest of us have extra time at home over the next few weeks, let's use some of it to pray for those who are working even harder to protect everyone else, and in many cases, facing much greater risks."

Houghs Neck Congregational Church Suspends Services, Postponing Yard Sale

Out of concern due to the outbreak of the coronavirus, Houghs Neck Congregational Church has suspended its Sunday worship services scheduled for March 22 and March 29.

At the end of the two-week period the church will re-evaluate what needs to happen going forward.

"These are unprecedented times that require unprecedented actions, but we will move through them knowing that God is always with us. Be wise, be safe, and keep in touch with one another, particularly our most vulnerable," the church said in a statement released Monday.

The church also announces that a yard sale scheduled for March 28 has been postponed. A new date for the sale will be announced at a later time.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 real photo postcard showing the old slate quarry that was off Apthorp Street in Norfolk Downs. Actually two separate quarry holes, the site was surrounded by Billings Road, Apthorp, Warwick and Marshall Streets. The house shown here is number 15 Warwick St. First opened in 1687, this ancient Quincy quarry was the source of thousands of slate gravestones found throughout the region. The quarry was filled in the late 1940s to eliminate the danger to children. It had been a favorite spot for ice-skating in the winter and carp fishing in the summer. The site is now zoned open space.

Sheriff's Office Assists With Sanitation Efforts

Responding to the outbreak of the coronavirus (COVID-19) in Massachusetts, Sheriff Jerry P. McDermott and the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office are assisting county administration and departments with sanitation efforts.

This past weekend, the Sheriff's office began electrostatically spray sanitizing Norfolk County court houses and buildings, including the Dedham Complex and Quincy District Court. In addition to county facilities, the sheriff's office will also be spraying cell blocks at several of the police departments across Norfolk County.

"We are happy to offer our resources to those in the county to ensure that we are doing our part in keeping the employees, and the general public healthy," said Sheriff Jerry McDermott. "We continue to work closely with the District Attorney and the Trial Courts to be sure every effort possible is being made to control and eliminate any further spread of the virus," he added.

"It is vitally important for different arms of government to work together through the COVID-19 crisis and we cannot thank the sheriff enough — both for his foresight in acquiring this equipment and for helping make the courts as safe as possible for those who need access to the justice system," said Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey.

"We are grateful for the sheriff's outreach to make sure that we are doing all that we can to make our county as clean and safe for our employees, Norfolk County residents, and all who utilize our buildings," said Francis W. O'Brien, chairman of the Norfolk County Commissioners. "I would like to thank Sheriff Jerry McDermott and his incredible staff for their efforts, especially Assistant Superintendent Dave Reilly, Assistant Deputy Superintendent Steve Randall and Sergeant Dave Munchbach."

QCAN Advocates Use Of Reusable Bags

Quincy's ban on single-use plastic bags took effect March 1 and Quincy Climate Action Network has been among the organizations easing the transition by distributing free reusable bags.

You may have seen the style of bags we're giving out; they have long been sold for a modest 10 cents at many local retail chains. They are made from low density polyethylene with a minimum thickness of 2.25 mm; have 80 percent post-consumer recycled material; are designed for at least 125 uses; are recyclable at many stores; and can easily be cleaned with dish detergent.

Most importantly, you need to reuse these bags only once to reduce greenhouse gas pollution compared to the paper bags stores are giving away.

It seems obvious, then, that reusable bags provide a high-quality, affordable alternative to single-use bags of either paper or plastic. Now the trick is to get consumers to switch to reusables. Ideally campaigns like ours will sway large numbers of shoppers to switch, but studies suggest this is highly unlikely. Our own observations during our giveaway confirm that a plastic bag ban without a modest fee for paper bags only succeeds in moving shoppers from environmentally harmful single-use plastic bags to environmentally harmful single-use paper bags.

In fact, short of a ban on all kinds of single-use shopping bags, there's only one proven way to get shoppers to get reusable bags and bring them to the store: impose a small fee on paper bags. The fee is not a money-grab, a tax, or any sort of punitive plot to separate Quincy's shoppers from their money. Rather, it is a little nudge to get us to adopt a healthier behavior.

The mayor and city council enacted the ban with our environment, our wildlife, and our waterways in mind, and those are all noble reasons. But, as a trained musician, I appreciate that a complex chord with a missing tone can ring dissonant. In this case, we are missing an important note that others who have gone before us have found: the fee on paper bags has been mandated by our state's two largest cities as well as two whole New England states plus Oregon and California.

QCAN will continue do our part by helping shoppers switch to reusable bags and by raising awareness of the environmental harm done by any kind of single-use shopping bag, but we also hope the city will do its part, by providing an incentive for them to make the switch.

With hope for a successful spring,

Major Issues: Trash Revaluation, Master Plan

The City Council has a number of major issues to deal with over the next few months. Among them:

Revaluation — Several orders are now pending in the council's finance committee, including: an appropriation order of $70,000 to hire an outside firm to start work on the revaluation of all real and personal property in the city. A second order would put this issue on the November ballot. A third would require the council to take a position on the issue.

Master Plan — Within a month, members of the city council should receive copies of the city's Master Plan and zoning studies.

Rubbish Disposal — Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa is considering that the city take and prepare an incinerator site in the Cashman's Quarry area of West Quincy.

COUNCIL TABLES

CONFLICT OF INTEREST ISSUE

The City Council ordinance committee tabled action on a proposal to classify members of the unpaid city boards as "special employees" under the conflict of interest law. The proposal was made by Ward 6 Councillor Richard W. Barry. At present, all city employees, including unpaid ones, are classified "regular" employees, prohibiting them from doing any business with the city. As "special" employees, unpaid board members would be restricted from doing business with the city only in areas over which they have jurisdiction.

MARSHLAND REZONING DRAWS OPPOSING VIEWS

Conservation of marshlands or retention of a valuable industrial site were the alternatives placed before the planning board as it considered a proposed zoning change for the Montclair marshes. Ten people spoke in favor of the proposal while 17 recorded their opposition. The Planning Board took the matter under advisement.

Quincy Pride Postpones March 26 Fundraiser

Out of an abundance of care and concern for the health of our community, Quincy Pride March 26th Fundraiser is temporarily cancelled.

A statement from the organization read:

"Our efforts to raise monies through fundraising events is critical to achieving the organization mission and produce inclusive events such as Q Pride Day. We are monitoring the situation and will issue a revised press release of our fundraiser when safe.

BID Hospital-Milton Visitor Restrictions, Entrance Closures Due To COVID-19

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton (BID Milton) has instituted new visitor restrictions to protect the health of patients, visitors and staff in response to the COVID-19 (coronavirus) virus pandemic.

As of March 13, the hospital will limit visitors to all care settings including inpatient units and the Intensive Care Unit.

Exceptions may be made to allow for no more than one healthy visitor at a time under select extenuating circumstances (e.g., family member for a patient at end of life, caretaker for essential needs). Decisions regarding visitor exceptions will be made by the patient's care team. No visitors under the age of 12 will be allowed.

For all approved visitors, each will be screened for the COVID-19 risk factors. If the visitor screens positive for any risk factors, they will be asked to refrain from visiting that day.

The hospital is also limiting the entrances that are open to the public. The main Highland Street, Reedsdale Road and Medical Office Building linkway entrance on the hospital's ground floor will now be closed.

The only open entrance into the hospital for patients or visitors will be the Emergency Department.

These new guidelines are in effect until further notice.

David Biele. Daniela Klaz, Sacred Harbor Photography

Shamrock Splash Raises $50,000 For Beach Programs

Save the Harbor/Save the Bay's 10th annual Harpoon Shamrock Splash held March 8th to benefit Save the Harbor and DCR's Better Beaches Program partnership brought nearly 300 beach-lovers together to raise funds to support free beach events and programs from Nahant to Nantasket in 2020.

This year, the "pledge and plunge" cold water fundraiser raised more than $50,000 to provide grants to community organizations to support free concerts, beach festivals, and youth programs on public beaches in a number of coastal communities including Quincy. Participants could direct their fundraising to their favorite local beach. Participants raised $2,949 for Wollaston Beach.

"Thirty years ago nobody wanted to go swimming on the region's public beaches. Today we are proud to say they are some of the cleanest urban beaches in the country," said Save the Harbor President Chris Mancini. "It's amazing to see the community that supports this event and supports our beaches from Nahant to Nantasket."

Before the sprint to the sea, Kennedy Elsey of Mix 104.1 pumped everyone up for the run into the Atlantic, but participants didn't need much encouragement this year. With only a few clouds in the sky, as Boston 25 meteorologist Vicki Graf reported that the air temperature was a delightful 54 degrees, and the water was a balmy 41.

"All of us at Harpoon look forward to taking a quick dip into the cold water after our Harpoon St. Patrick's festival to support a great cause and warm up with a refreshing Harpoon beer, a burger, and clam chowder on the beach with our friends from Save the Harbor/Save the Bay," said Harpoon Brewery President Charlie Storey, who splashes each year. "Sure it was cold in the water, but the warm feeling you get from giving back to your community stays with you for a long time."

Participants won JetBlue flights and great Harpoon swag for reaching fundraising goals. Trevor Etheridge from Jamaica Plain was the highest fundraiser, raising $2,550, and Ethan George from Brookline raised $2,050 and had the most individual donations. They each won round-trip JetBlue flights for their efforts.

The two costume contest winners, Jane Kepros from East Boston in a handmade frog costume, and Chris Graefe from Jamaica Plain in a speedo cowboy look, won JetBlue flights as well for their creativity and enthusiasm. Special thanks to Elsey, Storey, JetBlue's Donnie Todd, and Boston 25 Meteorologist Vicki Graf for serving as contest judges. Every splasher and contributor also had the opportunity to win prizes in two post-Splash JetBlue flight raffles.

Metropolitan Beaches Commissioner Rep. David Biele of South Boston took the plunge as well. "I was happy to join friends, residents and neighbors at this year's Save the Harbor/Save the Bay Harpoon Shamrock Splash. Funds raised will support a wide range of programs that increase access and enjoyment of local beaches through a partnership with the Department of Conservation and Recreation. Thanks to this year's swimmers, volunteers and sponsors for supporting and investing in our local beaches."

Save the Harbor's success would not be possible without our program partners and event sponsors, including Harpoon Brewery, JetBlue, Mix 104.1, The Daily Catch, The Blue Sky Collaborative, The Boston Foundation, The Richard Saltonstall Charitable Foundation, Beacon Capital Partners, P&G Gillette, National Grid, and Comcast.

In addition, Save the Harbor recognizes the Metropolitan Beaches Commission Co-Chairs Representative RoseLee Vincent and Senator Brendan Crighton, the legislative and community members on the Commission, the Baker-Polito Administration, our partners at the Department of Conservation and Recreation, the Boston Centers for Youth & Families, the YMCA of Greater Boston, and the hundreds of people who take part in the Harpoon Shamrock Splash every year, for all they do to make this great event such a success.

Beef and Mushroom Sauté

By MARIE

If you are looking for a quick, simple and satisfying recipe that contains beef, today's recipe will do that, I promise.

For this recipe you will need a tender cut of beef because it cooks up quickly, unlike meat that you would use in stew that would take longer. When I made this dish, I used sirloin tips.

Recipe:

1-pound tender beef
1 package of sliced mushrooms
2 tablespoons of flour (enough to coat meat)
1 cup of beef stock or "Better than Bouillon"
3 tablespoons of olive oil
¼ cup sherry wine (I use drinking sherry; not cooking sherry)
¼ cup of low sodium soy sauce

2 cloves of minced garlic
Salt and pepper to taste

Cut the meat into 1-inch pieces, place in a plastic bag with the 2 tablespoons of flour. Shake and coat well.

In the hot oil sauté beef until nicely browned, take beef out the pan, set aside and cover with foil to keep warm.

In the same pan, place the mushrooms add the sherry, the soy sauce and 1 cup of stock or "Better than Bouillon" mix until blended.

Then put meat back in pan, cover and simmer until beef and mushrooms are done. The ingredients will thicken.

If you would like you can serve this over polenta as I did; and I used the instant polenta. You can also serve over rice along with a nice artisan bread.

This recipe made a delicious, quick, satisfying meal.

Healthy Cinnamon Drink

By SUSIE

Ever crave a cinnamon bun?

Here is a delicious homemade drink that is not only delicious and should calm that craving, but is also good for you. Did you know that maple syrup contains antioxidants, zinc, manganese, and even some calcium.

Zinc helps boost your immune system and manganese helps with carbohydrate metabolism. Everyone knows how good bananas are for you and they also are the main sweetness in this drink. The riper the sweeter, therefore the better! Hope you like it!

1 frozen banana, cut into pieces (I usually peel and cut into pieces and freeze in a baggy)

1 cup unsweetened almond milk or coconut milk

1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon

1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract

1 teaspoon pure maple syrup

Cinnamon stick, for garnish

Simply blend everything in your high speed blender, ninja, vitamix, whatever you have. (Except for the cinnamon stick!) Enjoy!

Historical Society Closed Due To Virus

In response to the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) public health emergency, Quincy Historical Society closed Monday and will remain closed to the public until further notice.

This closure includes the museum, gift shop, and research library. All public and school programs will be postponed, with the rescheduled dates to be determined.

"The safety of our visitors, members, staff, and volunteers is our top priority, and we will keep you updated as we continue to assess the situation," said Alexandra Elliott, curator.

"Staff will continue to monitor our emails and voicemails. If you have any questions, contact us at: info@quincyhistory.org, (617) 773-1144, or message us on Facebook.

We apologize for any inconvenience that this closure causes, and we hope that our members stay safe and healthy," Elliott added.

Phelan Calls On Criminal Justice System To Further Protect Inmates, Correctional Officers

Former Quincy mayor William Phelan, a Democratic candidate for Norfolk County sheriff, is calling on district attorneys, trial court clerk magistrates, judges, probation officers and jails to work together to take appropriate measures to ensure the safety of correctional officers and their families, inmates and the general public to mitigate the exposure risk and ease the potential burdens on the healthcare system in case of infection.

"I commend sheriffs around the Commonwealth for being proactive in creating Coronavirus safety plans. I also applaud the Trial Courts efforts to limit the number of new people being sent to jail," said Phelan. "However, more needs to be done. Jails are at high risk for spread of this virus. With jury trials suspended, this could lead to longer periods in jail for pre-trial detainees.

"Therefore, I am calling for the following policies in our criminal justice system."

• Every pre-trial detainee should get automatic bail review.

• Every inmate within 90 days of their release date should receive an automatic hearing on a revise and revocation of their sentence taking into consideration the risks associated with continued confinement.

• All inmates serving time for non-violent crimes should receive a hearing on a revise and revocation of their sentence taking the continued risk of confinement to health and safety of the jail and healthcare system into consideration.

"We all need to work diligently to flatten the curve on the spread of this virus and I hope we take all necessary steps in the criminal justice system to ensure that," Phelan said, who is also an attorney.

Councillors Support Harriet Ave. Acquisition

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors unanimously approved a resolution asking Mayor Thomas Koch to consider acquiring a parcel of land on Harriet Avenue in Montclair to stop a potential development from going forward.

The resolution, introduced by Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain, was approved at the council's March 9 meeting. Later that night, Chris Walker, Koch's chief of staff, said the mayor was open to discussing the idea with Cain.

The councillor had hosted a community meeting in February to review Boston Property Ventures' plan to build 75 residential units at 0 Harriet Ave. More than 150 residents attended that night's meeting, with many of them voicing opposition to any development on site. Several residents said the city should acquire the land to stop development on site.

Cain on March 9 said the project "has caused considerable consternation" among area residents even before formal plans have been filed with the city.

"We held a neighborhood meeting a couple weeks ago, which was very energetic," he said. "Basically, what came out of this meeting was the suggestion that we take a look into acquiring this parcel so that we can protect this area."

"It does abut a wetland. It is in a primarily Residential A area and could potentially have various adverse effects on both the neighborhood as well as the environment."

The parcel at 0 Harriet Ave. includes 133,000 square feet of land. The parcel is located in a Business C zoning district, which allows multi-family housing developments, though the nearby neighborhood is zoned Residential A, which allows only single-family houses by right. The site includes wetlands areas and is also located in a federally designated flood plain.

The plan for the site, as presented at the community meeting, called for the construction of a six-story, 65-unit residential building and 10 townhouse style units. The larger building would include seven studio units, 36 units with one bedroom and 22 two-bedroom units. Each townhouse would have three bedrooms. The units in the larger building would be apartments while the townhouses would be sold as condominiums.

Eighty-one parking spaces would be provided on site, with spaces located in a surface lot and under the main building. Vehicular access would be through Harriet Avenue, with an emergency access coming from the State Street South complex.

Virtual Church At Quincy Point Congregational

Quincy Point Congregational Church, in response to the health emergency created by the coronavirus outbreak, announces it is trying a different approach to the regular worship service: virtual church.

Join Rev. Kimberly Murphy on Sunday morning via Facebook @QPCCoffice for worship at 10 a.m. or check the worship tab at www.quincypointcong.org. Log in, listen and sing along.

Worship is also broadcast on Wednesdays at 6 p.m. on Quincy Access TV- Channel 8.

As per the announcements made on Sunday, by both Governor Charlie Baker and Quincy Mayor Tom Koch, Quincy Point Congregational Church (QPCC), UCC, will be closed to all groups effective Tuesday, March 17 until Tuesday, April 7. This decision was made because the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has banned all groups 25+ in number from meeting. Keep in mind that these mandated orders and recommendations are frequently changing.

As of Monday, March 16, the Church Office will remain open, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Call or email the church if you have any concerns or questions.

Rev. Kim would like to thank you for your patience, good humor, faithfulness, and understanding as we together journey through these unprecedented times. "Please take care of one another and yourselves until we can, once again, gather together in worship," Rev. Kim said.

Holocaust Concert, Exhibition At Beth Shalom-Blue Hills

The Women's Network of Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills will sponsor a special concert and exhibition to commemorate Holocaust Memorial Day (Yom HaShoah) and the 75th Anniversary of the liberation of Auschwitz-Birkenau on Sunday afternoon, April 19th, beginning at 2 p.m.

The event is free and open to the public, but tickets are required and must be obtained from either the synagogue or Eventbrite (<https://congregationbethshalombluehillssyomhashoah.eventbrite.com>).

The exhibition, which will be unveiled at 2 p.m., is entitled "Yad Vashem's SHOAH: How Was It Humanly Possible?" It is Yad Vashem's first traveling exhibition, recounting major historical aspects of the Holocaust. It first opened at the United Nations in 2015, and is designed to promote discussions about the Holocaust, to impart its universal lessons and to foster a connection to its relevance to daily life in the 21st century.

The concert, beginning at 3 p.m., is Dana Sandler's "I Never Saw Another Butterfly," a beautiful chamber jazz composition and a moving tribute to the youngest victims of the Holocaust. It was inspired by the book of the same name, originally published in 1959, which is a collection of poetry and art by children in the Teresien concentration camp. Sandler's music is "captivating, and her voice is a sensitive musical instrument." After the concert, refreshments will be served, followed by a discussion: "Antisemitism: Legacy and Consequences."

Due to security considerations, there will be no admittance without a ticket. Tickets are free and available at <https://congregationbethshalombluehillssyomhashoah.eventbrite.com>. Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills is at 18 Shoolman Way (off Lodge Street) in Milton, and is handicapped accessible. There is limited free parking, and no parking is allowed on Lodge or Maitland Streets, but excess parking is available on nearby Pleasant St. For more information, call 617-698-3394 or email office@BethShalom-BlueHills.org.

Where Do Germs Hide? From Sponges To Smartphones

A Message From Ruth Jones, City Of Quincy Health Commissioner

By RUTH JONES
MSPH, BSN, RN,
BC, CP-FS

We all know that germs are everywhere. Some of their habitats are obvious such as toilets and litterboxes, however there are places and items that may escape your attention and may harbor all sorts of pathogens.

The simplest route for germs to escape their hiding places and find their path into your body is through your hands. Your hands are continually interacting with objects in your home, and they're also what you use to wipe your eyes and nose, and to feed yourself. This allows for a common way for infectious diseases to get past your skin; your body's main defense against these pathogens.

These are a few of the environments where germs love to hide:

Kitchen Sponge

Your kitchen sponge spends a lot of time being damp and warm; precisely the environment bacteria love to multiply in. It is particularly concerning if you cook with raw meat or chicken, notorious carriers of E.coli and Salmonella, some of most common sources of food poisoning. Keep in mind that contaminated foods on your kitchen sponge can leave their mark wherever they go such as the surface of the sink, counter and the drain.

Remote Control

Remote controls are one of the most germ-covered items in a home. As you channel surf, your fingers pass over a germ zone that rarely gets cleaned. All those buttons provide opportunities for germs to come into contact with your skin. And if you eat while you do this, your fingers are then potentially transferring germs onto the food you ingest, giving bacteria an easy route directly into your body and leaving you vulnerable to sickness.

Pet Toys

Researchers in Japan studied the bacterial plaque from 66 dogs and 81 humans. They found that both human and dog mouths are loaded with bacteria, just not of the same kind. They further discovered that many of these bacteria are extremely transferable, meaning that close contact with pet germs can upset the bacterial balance in your own mouth. These transmissible bacteria include E. coli, Salmonella, and Campylobacter, all of which can cause gastrointestinal infections.

Microwave

When it comes to cleaning, it seems that many people forget what may be lurking inside the microwave. It's important to sanitize your microwave unless you want your leftovers served with a side of bacteria.

Computer Keyboard

Your keyboard is covered in germs; especially if you're not the only one using it, so don't forget to delete those pathogens with a good cleaning. On the other hand, your cleaning regimen shouldn't end at the keyboard; make certain that your desk is sanitized as well. One study found more than 20,000 bacteria per square inch on desk surfaces. That's more than six times the number found on the average keyboard and more than 400 times the number found on the average toilet seat.

Cutting Board

Your cutting board is a haven for foodborne illness-causing bacteria, whether it is constructed of wood or plastic. Be sure to always clean and sanitize it thoroughly, especially after cutting raw meat and vegetables, and replace the board when it is worn.

Refrigerator

Though usually perceived of as an area that protects our food from bacteria, a refrigerator can contain such pathogens as E. coli, salmonella and listeria. This is especially true of the salad drawer and door handles.

Coffee Table

A popular destination for our remotes, phones and other bacteria-covered items, such as your feet, our coffee tables are typically covered with pathogens. This makes a good argument for proper cleaning and the regular use of coasters!

Water Bottles

Whether returning from the gym, school or the office, your water bottle may be covered with enough bacteria to make you sick. Be sure to throw it in the dishwasher after each use.

Makeup Bag and Purse

Typically dark, damp and with an abundance of items to feed on, the makeup bag is a refuge for harmful bacteria. Additionally, your purse travels to most of the places that you do; public restroom, floors of restaurants, market wagons and who knows where else. One study found that one in five purses and handbag handles contains bacterial contamination great enough to pose a threat to health.

Closets

Home to the coats, hats and gloves you use to keep yourself toasty while you're out and about, your closet is the nearest thing in your home to a public place. Bacteria from your travels flourish alongside those jackets you've been meaning to discard or donate.

Lunch Box

Contaminated foods and contact with dirty surfaces at school make your child's lunch box a tangible feeding ground for bacteria. Daily cleaning is a must.

Washing Machine

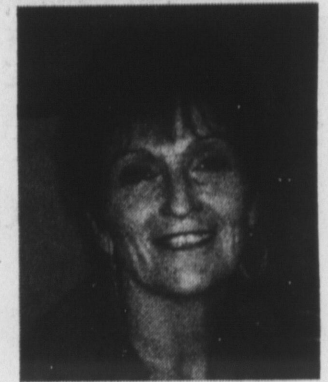

Even when it's full of detergent, there are copious amounts of germs inside your washing machine. Children's clothes and all of our undergarments provide for a multitude of bacteria.

Dishwasher

Not even your dishwasher is protected from bacteria. With an abundance of food particles and moisture, this is yet another place where germs are more than delighted to congregate.

Your Smartphone

Researchers found that people swipe, tap, type, and click over 2,600 times a day on average. Most people never even think to sanitize their phone. However, with all of that touching, your phone can become a breeding ground for various bacteria. One study found that of 150 cell phones, 124 showed bacterial growth, most commonly those that belong to the Staphylococcus family, some varieties of which can cause Staph infections. Also keep in mind areas that your cell phone ends up touching, typically your face, your ears, and your lips. The danger of spreading disease increases when you share your phone with someone else and can lead to cross-contamination.

Health Commissioner

Most of these germ hotspots have something in common; they are places that have continuous contact with your hands. In addition to cleaning and sanitizing, the simplest solution is to wash your hands properly, and often to prevent the spread of these potential disease-causing agents.

Ruth Jones is the health commissioner for the City of Quincy.

State Releases Policies Restricting Visitors To Nursing Homes

Aimed At Protecting Older Adults At Higher Risk For Coronavirus

The Baker-Polito Administration has released policies restricting visitors to nursing homes and rest homes in order to protect older adults at higher risk for Coronavirus (COVID-19) and other respiratory illness.

Health and Human Services Secretary Marylou Sudders, Department of Public Health Commissioner Monica Bharel and their teams reviewed the guidance with long term care facility operators via teleconference March 11.

This action follows Governor Charlie Baker's declaration of a State of Emergency in Massachusetts March 10th that was ratified by the Public Health Council March 11th granting the Commissioner of Public Health with the authority to implement the Governor's State of Emergency.

With this authority, the Commissioner of Public Health issued an order requiring all facilities - nursing and rest homes - to actively screen all visitors and to take measures to restrict visitors under certain circumstances.

"Everyone has a role to play to mitigate the spread of the Coronavirus outbreak in Massachusetts, and it's particularly important that we take precautions to keep older adults and those with health conditions safe," said Baker said. "This new guidance for long-term care facilities is critical to protecting older adults from COVID-19 and we appreciate the public's willingness to observe these important rules for the foreseeable future."

"Today's actions are being taken to protect older adults that are particularly vulnerable to coronavirus and other respiratory diseases, as we have seen as its spread across the world, including the United States," said Secretary Marylou Sudders. "Massachusetts, as we all know has an aging population - with 20% of residents being over 60 - and so we needed to act to protect our older residents, especially those in long term care facilities."

"Our goal at DPH is to protect the health and well-being of all Massachusetts residents, especially those at highest risk for COVID-19," said Commissioner Monica Bharel, MD, MPH. "We will continue to update our guidance as this outbreak evolves."

This guidance outlines how these facilities should protect older adult residents, who are at higher risk for Coronavirus. The guidance includes the following restrictions:

- Banning visitors who show signs or symptoms of a respiratory infection (fever, cough, shortness of breath, or sore throat)

- Visitors will be prohibited if in the last 14 days they had contact with someone with a confirmed diagnosis of COVID-19, are under investigation for COVID-19 or has been sick

- Visitors will be prohibited if they have travelled internationally in the last 14 days or are residing in a community where community-based spread of COVID-19 is occurring

- Visitors will not be allowed to visit long term care facilities if they currently feel sick or exhibit symptoms

In addition to specific recommendations for long term care facilities, the Administration updated its guidance to the general public, specifically urging older adults and those with health issues to avoid large crowds and events. Individuals who live in households with vulnerable people, like elderly parents, should also consider avoiding crowds to mitigate risk. This guidance is posted on the Department of Public Health's website, www.mass.gov/2019coronavirus.

The public is reminded of steps to take to limit the spread of COVID-19:

- Cover your mouth - when you cough or sneeze use a tissue or your inner elbow, not your hands

- Wash your hands - with soap and warm water or use an alcohol-based sanitizing gel

- Stay home if you are sick - and avoid close contact with others.

$10 Million Loan Fund Available For Small Businesses Impacted By COVID-19

Businesses With Under 50 Full-Time, Part-Time Employees Can Apply For Loans Up To $75,000; No Payments Due 6 Months

The Baker-Polito Administration Monday announced economic support for small businesses with a $10 million loan fund to provide financial relief to those that have been affected by COVID-19.

The $10 million Small Business Recovery Loan Fund will provide emergency capital up to $75,000 to Massachusetts-based businesses impacted by COVID-19 with under 50 full- and part-time employees, including nonprofits. Loans are immediately available to eligible businesses with no payments due for the first six months. Massachusetts Growth Capital Corporation (MGCC) has capitalized the fund and will administer it.

"As our administration continues to take steps to protect the health and safety of residents, we recognize the hardships facing the small businesses that create the foundation of the state's economy," said Governor Charlie Baker. "This recovery loan fund is a new resource to help small businesses address emergency needs due to the disruption caused by the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic."

"Small business owners and their employees are our neighbors and our friends, and their enterprises play vital roles in our communities, and we are committed to helping them cope with the impacts of COVID-19," said Lt. Governor Karyn Polito. "As we announce this small business recovery loan fund, we will continue to work with the Legislature and our federal partners to find ways to effectively provide assistance during this public health emergency."

"Our office remains in regular contact with the state's business community to provide updates and receive feedback as the administration continues to expand its comprehensive COVID-19 response," said Housing and Economic Development Secretary Mike Kennealy. "These new recovery loans complement other resources like the state WorkShare program and federal Economic Injury Disaster Loan program, as well as legislative efforts by the administration to support impacted workers."

"MGCC is committed to helping support the Commonwealth's small businesses through this time," said Lawrence Andrews, president and CEO of MGCC. "We are proud to offer this fund as it serves our mission to save jobs and promote economic development. All processing and funding will take place online through MGCC staff."

Social Security Matters

Ask Rusty – About the Dreaded 'IRMAA' Provision

Dear Rusty: About a month or two ago I was notified that my Social Security was being reduced from $1,583 a month to about $1,283 a month - a $300 deduction! They said it was because my income was over the limit on my last return. I filed my taxes "married - filing separately" because my wife has her own income. If we had filed jointly, I would not have had the reduction. My question is why wasn't this told to us when we filed our Income Tax last year instead of a last-minute thing? I am a 77-year old and a 100% disabled veteran, which probably has no effect on this, but wanted to add that information. Any light you can shed on the matter will be very much appreciated. Signed: Irritated Senior

Dear Irritated Senior: First, I want to thank you for your service to our country. Allow me to explain what I believe happened. Your net (not gross) Social Security benefit payment was probably reduced as a result of a rule known as "IRMAA" - the "Income Related Medicare Adjustment Amount." This is a supplement added to your Medicare Part B premium as a result of higher income, and a higher Medicare premium would mean a lower net Social Security payment.

Although filing your taxes separate from your wife does mean a lower income reported to the IRS for you, it also reduces the clip levels at which the IRMAA rule kicks in. For those who file income tax as an individual, IRMAA applies if your "provisional" income from all sources, including IRA or 401(K) withdrawals and half of your SS benefits for the tax year, exceeds $87,000. For those who file taxes jointly as a married couple, IRMAA applies if your combined income is more than $174,000. Incomes above those clip levels result in corresponding higher IRMAA premiums, up to a maximum of $491.60 (for 2020). So apparently your income for your filing status exceeded one of the higher IRMAA clip levels, which resulted in your monthly Medicare Part B premium going from the standard $144.60 to an IRMAA premium about $300 higher. Note that if your income in a subsequent year falls below the IRMAA clip levels, your Medicare premium will also go down to the level appropriate for your more recent income level.

As far as why you weren't told this in advance, neither Medicare nor the IRS (nor any other Government agency) will advise you in advance on such matters; the onus is upon you (and your tax preparer or financial advisor) to understand the implications of your income on your Medicare premium as well as your income tax obligation. You may want to speak to your tax advisor to see if there is a tax-filing option for eliminating the IRMAA. Once again, thank you for your service to our country, and I hope the above clarifies what happened to your Social Security benefit.

TRA Continues Program Relationship With Santander Bank

Training Resources of America, Inc. and Santander Bank, N.A. have once again joined forces to enrich educational programming for low- to moderate-income individuals throughout Massachusetts.

A recent Santander grant in the amount of $20,000 will help support Adult Literacy programming at four TRA locations including: Brockton, Quincy, Springfield, and Worcester, MA. More than 320 educationally and economically disadvantaged students, age 16 and over, enrolled in TRA Adult Basic Education (ABE) and English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL) classes will be the beneficiaries.

The classes, which are available at no cost to students, provide instruction in reading, writing, math, high school equivalency prep, all levels of English, work and college readiness, and financial literacy. The ultimate program goal is to help individuals become economically stable and self-sufficient.

Through the relationship with TRA, Santander employees also volunteer their time providing financial literacy training sessions to students. Students not only benefit from the educational standpoint, but from the opportunity to interact with Santander professionals. This current grant marks the fifth year of the Santander - TRA relationship.

"At Santander, we are committed to giving back to the communities where our customers live and work. We're proud to support such an impactful organization and one that is successfully improving work opportunities and economic outcomes for so many underserved young people and adults in Massachusetts," said Seth Goodall, Executive Director, Corporate Social Responsibility at Santander Bank.

Santander Bank is one of the country's top retail and commercial banks by deposits and a wholly owned subsidiary of Banco Santander - one of the largest banking groups in the world. With its corporate offices in Boston, Santander has more than 575 branches and over 2,000 ATMs principally located in the northeastern United States.

TRA is a private, non-profit organization with 45 years' experience providing education, employment, skills training and workforce development services to educationally and economically disadvantaged youth and adults. Headquartered in Worcester, TRA has six training sites in Brockton, Fitchburg, New Bedford, Quincy, Springfield, and Worcester.

According to TRA President and CEO Kim Harmon, "We are deeply grateful to Santander for their continued commitment, both financially and through employee volunteers, to TRA's mission to deliver quality education and training services and provide pathways to self-sufficiency for our clients."

Coronavirus: Pause For Concern

Gov. Charlie Baker meanwhile has ordered elementary and secondary schools to remain closed until April 6. Eating and drinking inside restaurants has been barred and gatherings of more than 25 people prohibited until that date as well.

The Quincy Sun will not be publishing issues on March 26 or April 2 as a result of the outbreak.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health on Tuesday afternoon said the number of presumptive positive and confirmed cases of COVID-19, the disease caused by the novel coronavirus, had risen to 218 in the state, an increase of 21 since Monday. Of that total, 102 are linked to an employee conference the biotechnology company Biogen held in late February.

The total number of cases in Quincy has risen to nine, Koch said Tuesday, eight of which are linked to the Biogen conference. The mayor said health officials are trying to determine how the ninth individual contracted the virus.

Koch has postponed public meetings through at least March 30, including this week's scheduled meeting of the School Committee; next week's City Council meeting has likewise been cancelled.

In a phone interview

Tuesday, Koch said he would ask councillors to convene in an emergency session later this week to re-purpose $500,000 from the city's snow and ice removal account, which is running at a surplus this year, to fight the epidemic. Koch said the money could be used to purchase protective gear for first responders, which could potentially allow for the establishment of a satellite testing facility in the city.

The mayor also plans to ask the Affordable Housing Trust Fund Committee to set aside $1 million for rent assistance for hospitality sector workers impacted by the pandemic. The city would work with the Quincy of Chamber of Commerce to disburse those funds.

Koch noted an emergency order issued by Baker last week suspending the open meeting law would allow those two bodies to meet by teleconference rather than in person.

The mayor said he has been proactive, communicating frequently with Baker and Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito, and spoke with U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch on Tuesday. Koch said he also talked with FoxRock Properties about reopening Quincy Medical Center if necessary or putting up tents on the hospital grounds to treat patients.

"We are doing everything we can in our power to minimize the impact this will have in our community," Koch said.

Quincy Health Commissioner Ruth Jones told city councillors last week the chance of the novel coronavirus spreading in the city and the state remained low. On Monday, she said the risk had increased, but there was no evidence of community transmission in Quincy.

"Overall in Massachusetts, the risk is rising a little bit," Jones said. "I would still say we are not seeing community transmission."

Jones said she expects the number of cases would continue to rise as the state ramps up its testing capabilities.

The Quincy Health Department was monitoring 37 individuals for COVID-19 as of Monday, Jones said, as a result of international travel or contact to one of the reported cases. Those residents are asked to self-isolate in their homes for 14 days, the incubation period for COVID-19. While self-isolating, they are asked to take their temperatures twice each day and report any fever over 100.4 degrees or any other symptom of the disease to health officials.

Koch had previously announced Quincy Public Schools would be closed this week and next in response to the outbreak.

Baker on Sunday, however, ordered all elementary and secondary schools to remain closed until April 6.

Baker also announced onsite consumption would be prohibited at restaurants starting Tuesday through April 6; take-out and delivery will still be allowed. The governor likewise banned gatherings of more than 25 people through April 6, though he emphasized that grocery stores and pharmacies would remain open.

"Our administration is taking these rapid steps to protect the health and safety of our residents to mitigate the spread of COVID-19," Baker said.

"We know that a lot of the measures we are putting into place, including mandatory school closures and prohibiting gatherings of 25 people or more, will cause disruption in people's day to day lives. With the steps we are taking today, we can ensure residents can still access key state services while taking necessary precautions to limit the spread of COVID-19."

The governor on Tuesday said he was not considering ordering residents to stay home.

"I've spoken about this before, but let me be clear, we are not planning any shelter in place orders," he said.

The state is also distributing $5 million to local boards of health and taking steps to expedite the onboarding process of more licensed health care professionals, Baker said.

The U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention on Sunday recommended gatherings be limited to no more than 50 people for the next eight weeks to stop the spread of COVID-19.

President Donald Trump went one step further this week, encouraging Americans to limit gatherings to 10 or fewer people in an effort to rein in the outbreak over the next 15 days. The president also said discretionary travel, shopping trips and social visits should be avoided.

"We have to get rid of this," Trump said on Tuesday. "We have to win this war, and ideally quickly, because the longer it takes, it's not a good situation. And I'm not even talking about the economy. I'm talking about the lives of people."

The president declared the outbreak a national emergency on March 13.

While Quincy Public Schools are closed, students will have access to enrichment material that has been posted on the school system's website, quincypublicschools.com.

To alleviate the burden on families with schools out of session, Quincy officials have said students would be able to pick up grab and go breakfast and lunch at Quincy High School, North Quincy High School, the Lincoln-Hancock Community School and Snug Harbor Community School on weekdays from 11 a.m. to noon.

As a precaution, students will not enter the schools while picking up their meals; the food will be distributed outside the main entrance to each building. Students are asked to promptly leave after receiving their meal to maintain social distancing. Additional information can be found on the school system's website.

Classes at Quincy College's two campuses - Quincy and Plymouth - have been cancelled through at least March 28 in response to the outbreak. The school's online classes will continue during that time as will clinical assignments, provided those sites remain open.

While municipal offices are closed to the public, Koch on Monday said the city will still operate and offices will remain staffed. Residents will be required to do business with the city by phone, online or through the mail. Departmental contact information can be found at quincyma.gov.

The decision to close public buildings will not impact emergency services, the mayor said.

Koch previously said late fees on excise bills due this week would be waived until April 1 to provide more time to mail payments.

All public facilities will continue to undergo aggressive environmental cleaning on a daily basis, the mayor stated.

Quincy Chamber of President Tim Cahill on Monday said the city's business owners should not panic.

"Regardless of how terrible and dangerous things look today regarding your health and the health and well-being of your businesses, this is not the time to panic," he wrote in an email to members.

"The best entrepreneurs look at every setback, every challenge and every failure as an opportunity. I don't know yet what that opportunity looks like or how long we will suffer before things turn around and we beat this virus - but I do know that we will."

Cahill said the organization would work to provide members with updates from state and local officials on the situation.

Baker on Monday announced a $10 million loan fund was available to assist small businesses impacted by the pandemic. Business-

Hiring A Home Inspector: BBB Industry Tip

By THE BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

What's a home inspection?

A home inspection is a visual inspection of the physical structure and mechanical condition of a home - from roof to foundation. The inspection is designed to identify problems, advise of repairs needed and, in some cases, provide preventive maintenance advice. A home inspection points out the positive aspects of a home, as well as the maintenance that will be necessary to keep it in good shape.

A home inspector may be a residential architect, structural engineer, or building contractor. Currently, home inspectors are not regulated on a federal level in either the United States or Canada. But many states and provinces have their own licensing requirements. To find out what your region requires, check out this list from American Society of Home Inspectors or this list from Canada. For structural engineer licensing requirements in the U.S., see the National Council of Structural Engineers Association (NCSEA) website.

Tips for Hiring A Home Inspector

Pick a home inspector who has experience, positive references, and is known for being very comprehensive. While this may cost more upfront, hiring a great inspector will save you money in the long run. If you don't get a complete, accurate inspection, you may miss major problems and your chance to negotiate repairs with the seller.

• Ask friends and acquaintances for recommendations. Ask for and experienced home inspector who is known for being very thorough.

• Find someone familiar with your type of home and the issues you need to inspect. Be sure your inspector specializes in homes, not commercial properties, and any issues you anticipate finding. For example, if you're concerned about a home's structure, consider hiring a professional engineer or architect who also does general home inspections. Also, be sure your agreement with the inspector covers the systems you most need to have examined.

• Ask prospective inspectors questions about their professional training, relevant experience and/or length of time in business. Find out if the inspector belongs to a professional association, such as the American Society of Home Inspectors, the National Society of Professional Engineers, or the Canadian Association of Home and Property Inspectors. Membership in professional associations may offer added assurance of an inspector's qualifications and training.

• Make sure your home inspector is working in your best interests. For example, many home inspectors rely on referrals from real estate agents for their business. This means that the inspector may be more interested in maintaining that relationship than providing you a thorough inspection. They may be less inclined to identify major repair issues that hold up the sale of your home. Also, be cautious about hiring a home inspector who is looking to get contracting work from you.

• Be present during the inspection. The majority of inspectors will allow you to tour the home with them and ask questions during or after the inspection. The inspection can last anywhere from two to five hours, depending on the size of the house.

• Ask how soon after the inspection will you receive a copy of the home inspection final written report. Carefully read your home inspection report and make a list of items that need correction. Understand that the home inspection report records the condition of the home, both positives and negatives. This will help you to determine your future expenditures for repairs and maintenance. The report will contain useful information that serves as a reference for you in the future.

• Check BBB.org to see if the home inspector is a BBB Accredited Business and read reviews. Ensure that the business responds to complaints in a timely fashion.

Ultimately, no inspection can guarantee that something won't go wrong with a home, but getting a thorough inspection job can really help prevent expensive, nasty surprises.

A Message From Norfolk Registry Of Deeds Regarding Coronavirus

The following message was sent to The Quincy Sun for publication on Monday from the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds regarding the coronavirus:

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds has remained open for business. However, the logistics are evolving in this very fluid and unprecedented public safety crisis involving COVID-19.

'Saving By Shaving' Raises $7M For Children's Hospital

Granite Telecommunications Hosts 7th Annual Fundraiser

More than 1,000 people shaved their heads at Quincy-based Granite Telecommunications' seventh annual "Saving by Shaving" event, raising $7 million for Boston Children's Hospital.

Saving by Shaving proceeds support Boston Children's mission of unmatched care and world-changing science and commitment to healing children, helping families, and fueling lifesaving research for every child, putting kids from around the world on the path to a healthier, more promising future.

Granite CEO Rob Hale, along with Granite teammates, families and friends, were joined by community leaders, celebrities and athletes, including Gov. Charlie Baker Jr.; Drew Brees, Super Bowl champion quarterback for the New Orleans Saints; David "Big Papi" Ortiz, former Major League Baseball designated hitter and first baseman for the Boston Red Sox; and other sports legends.

"Today, I'm especially proud to be part of the Granite team," said Hale. "In addition to the generous support of our sports heroes and community leaders, 1,400 of our teammates volunteered to sacrifice their hair for a couple of months and, in many instances a year, for some of the young ladies," said Hale. "They did it because they want to help children in Boston and around the world."

"This is an incredible opportunity for everyone to come out on behalf of the children and Boston Children's Hospital," said Sandi Fenwick, CEO of Boston Children's Hospital. "It's truly an inspiring day to see so many people willing to do this. Personally and professionally, it's amazing. Thank you to Rob and Karen and the Hale family, but also to the whole Granite team. You are really unbelievable friends of the hospital and, more importantly, for children broadly."

In the past seven years, more than 9,000 people have participated in the "Saving by Shaving" event by shaving their heads and donating their hair, raising more than $35 million for charitable organizations.

For each person who shaved their head or donated at least 8 inches of their hair, Granite donated $2,500, which was matched dollar for dollar by the Hale family, for a total of $5,000 per head to pediatric research and treatments for The Every Child Fund at Boston Children's Hospital.

Additionally, all locks of hair will be donated to Hair We Share, which creates custom wigs free of charge for those affected by medical hair loss.

Plus, a donation of $100 was made for every "chemo cap" (a hat for cancer patients who've lost hair due to chemotherapy) created by the Granite Fiber Arts team.

This year the team handcrafted 234 hats for children and adults.

The "Saving by Shaving" event also was supported by Granite's business customers and local businesses,

Anti-Distracted Driving Simulator At NQ Auto Academy

Commonwealth Insurance Partners recently presented Distractology to North Quincy Auto Academy at North Quincy High School.

Developed and funded by the Arbella Insurance Foundation, Distractology was one of the first programs in the country to address distracted driving with young, inexperienced drivers. Drivers who have completed Distractology are proven to be 15 percent less likely to have an accident or receive a traffic violation. Results are based upon data obtained from Arbella Mutual Insurance Company's youthful operators who took the Distractology training when compared to those who did not from 2010 through 2018. The study showed that drivers were 15 percent less likely to have an accident or violation.

According to the CDC, 9 people are killed every hour and more than 1,000 are injured as a result of distracted drivers. Distracted driving has become a top concern among drivers in the United States with recent research from the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety. The study shows that 96-97% of drivers view reading and typing a text/email as dangerous, while 32-41% of drivers admitted to engaging in these activities. The Journal of Adolescent Health has also found 38% of teenagers across the country text while driving. In Massachusetts, 40% of teenagers text while driving. In Connecticut, 30% of teenagers text while driving.

"Distracted driving problems continue to escalate, so it's critical to do everything we can to educate new drivers to the dangers associated with distracted driving," said John Donohue, chairman, president and CEO of the Arbella Insurance Group and chairman of the Arbella Insurance Foundation. "Celebrating its tenth anniversary, Distractology aims to curb potentially hazardous behaviors before they become habits. It's our hope that by working together with new drivers, educators and parents, we can create a including Dunkin' Donuts, which provided coffee and breakfast for the volunteers and barbers/stylists; and professional barbers and stylists, who donated their time and expertise.

Granite's annual "Saving by Shaving" fundraiser began seven years ago when CEO Rob Hale jokingly dared a member of his team to shave his ZZ Top-style beard in exchange for a $1,000 donation to a cancer hospital. Over the next two weeks, hundreds more Granite teammates reached out to Hale asking for the same opportunity to raise funds and shave their heads or beards in solidarity with those undergoing chemotherapy. From there, 428 teammates turned out at Granite's first "Saving by Shaving" event and raised more than $2.2 million to benefit cancer research.

new generation of safe drivers who believe distracted driving is unacceptable."

Distractology features a mobile classroom outfitted with two high-tech driving simulators designed to give new drivers the chance to experience the perils of distracted driving. Simulations are based on real-world examples, including texting, posting to social media sites like Facebook and Snapchat, and changing the radio all while navigating residential and highway conditions.

To date, more than 19,460 new drivers, meaning those that have been licensed less than three years or have a learner's permit, have completed the Distractology training. After completing the course, students reported they were 25 percent less likely to check their phone while driving compared to before the training exercise. Compared to their attitude before the course, students were 30 percent less comfortable with the idea of multitasking while they drive. By changing both students' actual behavior and the way they view distracted driving, the Arbella Insurance Foundation continues to show meaningful progress in affecting individuals as well as the broader youth culture around this issue.

"Over the past 10 years, Arbella's Distractology campaign has made enormous strides in terms of combating distracted driving," said John Hegarty of Commonwealth Insurance Partners. "The program is proven to decrease accident rates and traffic violations by 15 percent for participating drivers. We're proud to support Distractology's important mission."

The Distractology curriculum and simulations are based on research funded by Arbella Insurance Foundation and conducted by the University of Massachusetts Amherst (UMass Amherst). Teens spend about 45 minutes training on the simulators. After this, participants are asked to log on to Distractology.com/the-challenge to finish their training by completing a short, on-line interactive video reinforcing what they learned in the trailer. Students who complete the eLearning Challenge are entered to win a $500 scholarship.

Distractology will travel to various communities in Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island during the 2019-2020 school year, offering 45 minutes of simulated distracted driving to each participant. Fully funded by the Arbella Insurance Foundation, Distractology is free to eligible drivers.

6 Apartments Approved In NQ

By SCOTT JACKSON

A developer's proposal to build six apartments on Sagamore Street in North Quincy got the greenlight from the Planning Board.

The board on March 11 approved Todd Egan's request to construct the new residential building at 92 Sagamore St. The project will go before the Zoning Board of Appeals for variances and a special permit to build in a flood plain.

The site at 92 Sagamore St. includes 7,358 square feet of land in a Business B zoning district. A single-story warehouse is presently located on the site.

Egan's proposal would replace the warehouse with a two-story building with six residential units. Thomas Cavanagh, the applicant's attorney, said the building would include two one-bedroom units and four units with two bedrooms each. The units will be rented as apartments, Cavanagh said.

Parking will be provided in a surface lot on site that will accommodate nine vehicles, which meets the requirements for a residential building in a Business B district.

In other business March 11, the Planning Board:

Continued until April 8 a public hearing on Michael Boyce's proposal to construct a 24-unit residential building at 11-17 Newbury St. in North Quincy. The matter was continued because there was not a quorum of board members who could hear the proposal.

Continued until April 8 a public hearing on Robert Mattie's plan to renovate the commercial building at 90 School St. in Quincy Center to create a mixed-use building with 18 parking spaces on the lower level, commercial space at street level and nine one-bedroom apartments on the second floor. An attorney for the applicant told the board plans for the project are still being revised.

Continued until April 8 the public hearing on Eric Zhang's request to build a mixed-use building with 75 residences and four storefronts at 21-29 Beale St. in Wollaston Center. Revisions are still being made to that proposal.

Continued the public hearing on Charles McCarthy's request to construct a 31-unit residential building at 85-105 Myrtle St. in North Quincy until April 8.

Continued until April 8 a public hearing on Derrick Fitzgerald's request to build a six-story, 70-unit residential building at 24-26 Adams St. in Quincy Center.

Allowed the Galvin Development Company to withdraw without prejudice its proposal to build a 30-unit residential building at 507 and 511 Hancock St. in Wollaston. The Galvins have reached an agreement to purchase the property at 503 Hancock St. and incorporate that site into the proposal. Those new plans could be presented as soon as April 8.

The board also welcomed a new alternate member, Larry Liuzzo, who was formerly the constituent services director at City Hall. Liuzzo replaces John Ryan as an alternate member.

Quincy Housing Authority, NeighborWorks Seek Germantown Subdivision

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Housing Authority and NeighborWorks are seeking permission for a subdivision that officials say could allow for additional residential units in the vicinity of O'Brien Towers in Germantown.

The Planning Board on March 11 heard the applicants' request for the subdivision at 0 & 71 Bicknell St. and 23 St. Germaine St. No vote was taken that night as the Planning Department continues to review the request; the matter will be back before the board on April 8.

In September 2018, the board granted NeighborWorks permission to build the Germantown House, a five-unit group home for developmentally disabled adults, at 71 Bicknell St. The group home — already under construction — is being built in partnership with Work Inc., who will staff the building. Tim Doherty, NeighborWorks' real estate development director, said the original plan for the site included a new driveway off Bicknell Street to access a parking area for the group home.

NeighborWorks has since reached an agreement with the Quincy Housing Authority to utilize the main entrance to O'Brien Towers at 73 Bicknell St. to access the site in lieu of building a new driveway from Bicknell Street to the group home, Doherty said.

"When we were before you last, one of the comments was can you negotiate some access from the housing authority and do away with what is ultimately a superfluous driveway," Doherty said. "We were able to reach an agreement with the housing authority."

The subdivision plan — which would convert the O'Brien Towers driveway to private right of way — must be approved as part of that proposal, he explained.

Claudio Sala, an engineer for the applicant, said the driveway leading to O'Brien Towers has been well-maintained over the years. It is 30 feet wide with a sidewalk along one side.

"Basically, it's a road. It's a very well-maintained road, it's a very well-constructed road and it's in good shape. It's in excellent shape," Sala said. "Buses come in and out and there is no problem with traffic flow."

Rob Stevens, the city's deputy planning director, said the housing authority, not the city, would remain responsible for the driveway if it were converted to a private road as part of the subdivision.

Stevens said the subdivision plan would allow for better access to the NeighborWorks group home while also giving the Quincy Housing Authority the opportunity to construct new housing units in the space between O'Brien Towers and Bicknell Street.

"This is in line with the executive director's mission to try to capitalize on their land area and the potential to add additional affordable housing units," Stevens said. "We don't know if that will ever come to light, but this will create a separate parcel for the housing authority."

City To Take 3 Parcels For New Public Safety HQ

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors approved Mayor Thomas Koch's to take by eminent domain three parcels of land in the vicinity of Broad Street as part of the proposal to build a new public safety headquarters nearby.

The city will pay up to $6.7 million for those parcels of land.

Councillors approved Koch's request to take the parcels at 24 Broad St., 39-45 Broad St., and 40 Field St. in a 7-1 vote on March 9. Councillor Anne Mahoney opposed the request while Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci was not in attendance.

In the same vote, councillors awarded $1.95 million to the owners of 24 Broad St., a 49,619-square-foot parcel; $3.75 million to the owners of 39-45 Broad St., a 50,562-square-foot parcel; and $1 million to the owners of 40 Field St., a 19,201-square-foot parcel.

City Solicitor Jim Timmins provided councillors with a price range for each of the parcels in a December memo, based on appraisals undertaken by Steven Foster on behalf of the city. The awards granted by councillors were on the high end of each of those ranges.

James Masterman, an eminent domain attorney working for the city, said councillors were provided price ranges so they could make their own determinations about the parcels' values.

"We were not looking to come up with a particular number at this point other than to shape for the council what we thought the likely range of values would be," Masterman said.

"We didn't want to go before the council and say this is what the number must be without having a fulsome discussion with you as to what went into each of these appraisals and talk about data if you want...rather than just accepting that this is what Mr. Foster's opinion of value was."

Mahoney asked several questions about the project during the council meeting. The new public safety building, which will be built in the vicinity of the current police headquarters at 1 Sea St., is in a flood plain, she noted.

Timmins said most of the surrounding neighborhood is in a flood plain and the design of the new building would take that into consideration. Emergency vehicles, he noted, would be stored on the second floor of a new garage, which would place them out of the flood zone.

Koch's chief of staff, Chris Walker, said the location is the best possible choice for the new building.

"That location is where the police station is today.

That police station/public safety headquarters is sustainable for future development. That is the location that is best suited to hold a police station/public safety headquarters," Walker said.

"That does not mean there aren't some engineering challenges associated with it. Of course there are, we're a coastal city [with] 27 miles of coastline and a vast flood plain, and we have to deal with those, but in cases like this where a building already exists, we can work around those through engineering."

Mahoney also raised questions about a reverter clause for the property at 24 Broad St., which was formerly home to the Bryan VFW Post. That clause, she said, would have enabled the city to take back the land after the post closed about a decade ago and before it was sold to its current owner.

Masterman said such language does exist in documents used to convey the property originally but going ahead with the eminent domain taking of the land would allow the city to clear the title for property going forward. The current owner of 24 Broad Street would have to prove clear title to the land before receiving the $1.95 million the council awarded, he added.

"A bona fide purchaser in the market bought it and that owner has rights. I am sure we are going to hear all about it in the courts," Masterman said. "In the meantime, to protect the taxpayer, we will not be paying that money until the title is resolved."

Following the meeting, Mahoney said she opposed the eminent domain takings because the city should have taken back the land at 24 Broad St. previously.

"I won't vote for something that the taxpayers of the city of Quincy should have gotten," she said. "We're paying $1.9 million that we should never have had executed and sold. That makes me call into question just about everything we're doing right now."

In addition to replacing the current police station, the new public safety headquarters will house the administrative offices for the Quincy Fire Department and the Emergency Management Department. The fire apparatus - Engine 1, Ladder 1 and Rescue 1 - currently based out of departmental headquarters at 40 Quincy Ave. will remain there.

The money to purchase the land will come from a $32 million bond city councillors approved in December. That bond included funds to purchase five parcels of land, including the three taken by eminent domain March 9.

In addition to those three parcels, the city purchased the vacant lot at 47 Quincy Ave. from National Grid for $1.5 million in February. City officials have said that site could one day be used for a new fire station to replace the facility across the street.

The city is also looking to purchase 450 Southern Artery, which is now home to a Stop & Shop gas station; the fuel tanks on site could be used to fuel the city's emergency vehicles at the public safety building. Walker, Koch's chief of staff, said negotiations for that parcel of land remain ongoing.

The construction of the new public safety building will also require the demolition of the Quincy Animal Shelter and Father Bill's, both of which are located on Broad Street and are in city-owned properties. A new animal shelter is planned for Quarry Street while Father Bill's could move to 39 Broad St.

The $32 million bond also included funds to complete the design of the new building. The design should be finalized later this year and administration officials are expected to go before the council in the fall to seek an additional bond to build the new headquarters.

The new building could open as soon as the fall of 2022 with site work completed the following spring.

Liberty Tavern Opening In Quincy Center

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new restaurant offering pizza and American tavern food is set to open in Quincy Center later this spring.

The Board of License Commissioners on March 10 granted a common victualler license, an all alcohol license and cabaret license to Liberty Tavern. The new eatery will be located at 1647 Hancock St., which was most recently home to Angelo's Coal Fired Pizza. The new restaurant is named for Liberty Tree Park, which is located across the street.

Liberty Tavern's manager, Evan Harrington, said he wants to reuse the former pizzeria's ovens, which remain on site, to cook pizza and American tavern food.

"Angelo's has these two big coal-fired ovens, so we want to keep the pizza theme going. There is no reason why we should waste those ovens," Harrington said. "We also want to expand the menu to more of an American-tavern style with burgers, sandwiches, some good entrees and a few other things we can pop out of those ovens."

Harrington's business partner, Nick Palermo, said Liberty Tavern could open as soon as May 1 following cosmetic renovations inside the space, which has been home to several other restaurants over the years.

"It needs a cosmetic makeover from what it was," he said. "We're trying to make it so when guests arrive, they can see it's different...it's a complete 180 from what was there prior."

Harrington, a 2006 North Quincy High School graduate, has been a bartender at the popular Lincoln Tavern in South Boston for four years. He previously worked as a bartender at Granite Links for five years.

Palermo is currently the owner and manager of the Greyhound Tavern in Bridgewater but will work at the new Quincy Center restaurant full-time. He was formerly the general manager at Capo Restaurant in South Boston and had worked at the Lincoln Tavern with Harrington prior to that.

"Both of them know how to run a bar. They know how to run a restaurant," said attorney Christopher Harrington, who is also Evan Harrington's father.

"They are both experienced in working in high-volume locations."

Christopher Harrington said his clients have signed a five-year lease for the space on Hancock Street, with options to renew that deal for another 15 years.

"We're hoping that everything goes well, and they will be there for the next 20 years," he said.

The Liberty Tavern will have an occupancy of 180 patrons, Christopher Harrington said. Its licensed hours are 8 a.m. to 1 a.m. six days a week and 10 a.m. to 1 a.m. on Sundays.

In other business March 10, the board granted a common victualler license to the Casual Cup Café, the new operator of the café inside the main branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library at 40 Washington St. Manager Amy Holmes said she wants to offer patrons affordable coffee and healthy food.

On Monday, March 9, 2020, at approximately 1:26 p.m., Officers Farina and DiMaggio, along with Brewster Ambulance were dispatched to an apartment building near the armory for a report of a female who just jumped out of a third floor window.

Officer DiMaggio arrived on scene first and located the female, who was laying on her back against the building. Although there were no signs that she hit her head, she seemed completely confused and could not answer any questions. Officer Farina arrived on scene and attempted to determine her identity and extent of injuries but she remained incoherent but now started shouting, "Allah Akbar."

While Brewster Ambulance EMTs began assessing the female, a male approached and identified himself as the female's boyfriend. He said they were laying in her bed when she suddenly sat up, ran towards the third floor window, opened it and began climbing through it. He ran to her and was able to briefly hold onto her as he yelled to his brother to call the Police. He was unable to hold on long and when she fell to the ground, he ran down the steps to render aid.

When asked what happened, the male stated he believed the female was under the influence of a powder that she bought online. He then provided Officer Farina with the jar which read, Phenibut HCL Powder. An online source indicated the powder, mixed with water, was used to treat anxiety, fear, depression, and post-traumatic stress.

The EMTs took custody of the jar in the event the hospital needed information from it to treat the victim. Brewster Ambulance transported the female to Boston Medical Center for treatment of non-life-threatening injuries. It was also noted that on March 8, at 1:40 a.m., police officers were dispatched to this address for the same female hallucinating, however, she fled the scene.

After an extensive search of the area, the female was located near Central Middle School. She was naked and stated she took drugs that she purchased on the internet. In his report, Officer Farina requested that counseling services provided through the Police Department facilitate treatment options. Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Monday, March 9, 2020, at approximately 11:25 a.m., Officer Rolfsen was on routine patrol when he observed a gray Nissan Murano, bearing MA Reg. 8SZN90, traveling southbound on Quincy Shore Drive in the area of Sachem Street. The officer conducted a random check of the license plate, which came back to a 2007 GMC Sierra.

At this time, the vehicle turned into the Beachcomber parking lot and quickly exited back onto Quincy Shore Drive, then made a left hand turn on West Elm Avenue. Officer Rolfsen briefly lost sight of the suspect vehicle but then spotted two individuals standing outside of a home on West Elm Avenue. The two males, later identified as brothers, appeared to be out of place and acted very suspicious.

The Officer then spotted the suspect vehicle parked in the driveway with a female standing outside. At this time, Officer Rolfsen informed police communications he would be out with two males. The female approached the officer and told him she had "No idea who the two men are" and was concerned why their vehicle was parked in her driveway.

The officer spoke with the brothers, who refused to state who was driving the vehicle. A warrant check was conducted which showed that one brother had an active felony default warrant out of Brockton District Court. The other brother then said the vehicle belongs to a third brother and the plates were registered to that brother's GMC Sierra.

Neither brother was able to provide any documentation regarding the Nissan Murano, however it was not reported stolen. The Murano was towed away because it was not insured, unregistered, and had attached plates.

The brother with the warrant, a 39-year-old Brockton resident, was transported to the station for booking. The other brother, 44-years old and from Brockton, consented to a search of his person which yielded roughly $7,000 on him. He claimed he just went to the bank.

Neither brother responded to the question of what they were doing in the area but stated they owned an asphalt company. Although it cannot be established that these brothers were soliciting business for their asphalt company, it is the season for it.

The license plate again is MA Reg. 8SZN90 and someone with that license plate inquires about doing your driveway, give the police a call. Nice Work!

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A pesky health problem should clear up soon. Meanwhile, travel -- both for personal as well as for business reasons -- is strong in the Aries aspect this week, and well into the next.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Look for Bovines to be on the move this week, whether it's traveling for fun or for business. Other "moves" include workplace adjustments and, for some, relationship changes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Geminis who have just gone through a hectic period involving job and/or family matters might want to take some well-earned time out to relax and restore those drained energy levels.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A romantic situation seems to have stalled, just when the Moon Child was expecting it to go forward. Could that be a bad case of miscommunication going on. Talk it over openly and honestly.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Showing a genuine interest in something that's important to a friend, family member or colleague could open a communication line that had been pretty much shut down for a while.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Making a potentially life-changing decision takes as much knowledge as you can gather, plus determination and patience. Take your time working it out. Don't let anyone rush you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should be back on schedule and heading in the right direction after clearing up a misunderstanding. But there could still be some setbacks. If so, correct them immediately.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A business matter keeps you pretty busy, but try to squeeze in time to be with family as well as close friends. You need the good vibrations you get from people who care for you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Investing in an attractive prospect (business or personal) with little or no information can be risky. Avoid future problems by getting all the facts before you act.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone close to you might have an unexpected reaction to a decision you feel you're prepared to make. Listen to his or her point of view. It could prove to be surprisingly helpful.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't give up yet. That once warm, personal relationship that seems to be cooling off fast could recover with some tender, loving care, and who better than you to provide it?

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Career matters are strong this week. You might want to enter a training program to enhance your skills. Also, consider getting professional help in preparing a brilliant resume.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of respecting the feelings of others, which is one reason people feel comfortable having you in their lives.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- A star is about to be born before our very eyes. He's the guy in several Crown Royal commercials, and his name is Anthony Ramos.

Who? He created the dual roles of John Laurens and Philip Hamilton in the original production of "Hamilton" at The Public Theater in January 2015. When "Hamilton" transferred to Broadway that July, he re-created his dual roles in the mega hit that had theatergoers paying scalpers $500 a seat. Before leaving "Hamilton," Ramos re-created his roles, as did the rest of the original cast, for the upcoming film version.

He next played Ramon, Lady Gaga's friend, in "A Star Is Born" (2018), and took a turn with "Godzilla: King of the Monsters" in 2019. Come June 26, he'll star in Lin Manuel-Miranda's film version of his other hit Broadway show, "In the Heights." In September, Ramos will be with Liam Neeson, Jai Courtney, Kate Walsh, Robert Patrick and Jeffrey Donovan in the crime thriller "Honest Thief."

He's currently shooting, with Rachel Brosnahan -- "The Marvelous Mrs. Maisel" herself -- the comedic sci-fi film "Distant," about an asteroid miner who crashes on an alien planet and desperately tries to find a female survivor trapped in her escape pod. Then, on Oct. 15, 2021, the world will see the filmed version of Broadway's "Hamilton," which Disney paid $74 million to acquire.

Sorry ladies, but the handsome, charming Anthony is engaged to his "Hamilton" co-star Jasmine Cephas Jones, who played the dual roles of Peggy Schuyler and Maria Reynolds in both the Broadway and film versions of "Hamilton."

Speaking of stars, Sophia Loren, one of the last four living movie stars of Hollywood's Golden Age, and her director son Edoardo Ponti have ensured a huge audience for their film "The Life Ahead." Sophia admits, "In my career, I've worked with the biggest studios, but I can safely say none have had the breadth of reach and cultural diversity of Netflix, and that's what I love about them." Netflix added, "'The Life Ahead' is a beautiful and brave story that, much like Sophia herself, will be embraced by audiences all around the world."

As we reported earlier, Sophia feels this is one of the most important films of her career and maybe one of her last, and she wanted the largest audience she could find. It looks like she succeeded.

Get ready for Goldie Hawn, Bette Midler and Diane Keaton, who scored $181 million against a $26 million cost with "The First Wives Club" (1996), to get back together again in "Family Jewels." It's about three women who were once all married to the same man and now are forced to spend Christmas together, along with their children and grandchildren. From first wives to triple trouble.

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Rammelsberg Furniture

If you never lived in Ohio you've probably never heard of Mitchell & Rammelsberg furniture. It was the largest furniture manufacturers of its time located in the Midwest, but not in Grand Rapids, where most of the furniture was made. (Lots of lumber and goods are transported from the Great Lakes to the Mississippi River and then to the ocean and overseas.) The company started in either 1836 or 1847 in Cincinnati. It made top-quality Victorian furniture with hand carving and steam-driven woodworking machines making the parts. It became Robert Mitchell Furniture Co. in 1881 and didn't close until 1940.

Pieces often were marked "M & R," or the inside of a drawer might be stamped "Mitchell & Rammelsberg." Only a few pieces of a bedroom set were marked, so many pieces today are identified by the design and quality of the work. The company worked in many styles, from Classical to Egyptian Revival. It also made dining sets, desks, sofas, hall trees, occasional tables and other pieces. Buyers pay the most for mahogany and the least for walnut, but the design, carvings and trim also influence the price. A mahogany bedroom suite with bed, table, chairs and dressers sells for thousands of dollars today, but they are scarce.

Q: I have a decorative porcelain dish marked "Not for food serving, may poison food." I'm not sure if it's an antique. Can you explain the marking?

A: The wording on your dish indicates it is not an antique. In 1971, the Food & Drug Administration set regulations on the amount of lead in glazes on ceramic dishes used for food. The standards have been revised since then and now also include regulations governing the amount of cadmium in the glaze. Cadmium is often used in bright red and orange glazes. The words marked on your dish are a label the FDA requires on dishes that contain unacceptable levels of these metals.

Ceramic dishes made in Asia or Mexico, especially those with bright colors, are more likely to be unsafe than those made in Europe or the U.S. Acidic foods can cause the metals to leach out of the glaze if the dish hasn't been fired properly and the glaze completely sealed. Enjoy your dish as a decorative piece, but don't use it for food. There are some unlabeled antique dishes that have high lead or cadmium glaze.

Strange BUT TRUE

* In 1883, Bill Kinsman of Tombstone, Arizona, was the subject of a practical joke when the Tombstone Epitaph announced his intention to marry one May Woodman. The surprised future groom countered with a notice of his own that he had no such plans whatsoever -- and was soon after shot to death by the deeply humiliated Ms. Woodman.

articles on pink paper and his poetry on yellow paper.

* Golf balls were originally made from dried cow eyeballs.

* The tea bag was an accidental invention. In 1908, tea merchant Thomas Sullivan distributed his samples in small silken sacks. His customers, not realizing they were samples, dunked them in hot water, and Sullivan soon found himself swamped with orders for his "tea bags"!

* In his travels, Marco Polo believed at one point that he had stumbled across unicorns, writing that "They are very ugly brutes to look at. They are not at all such as we describe unicorns." Not surprising, considering that he was actually viewing rhinoceroses.

* Turn on the hot water for three or four minutes to loosen debris on shower walls. It's much easier to clean when the tile is warm and steamy.

* Here's a great storage

* "To reach the highest cobweb or the lowest dust bunnies, get a yardstick and cover one end with an old tube sock. Use a rubber band to secure it to the stick and you can use it to swipe at the high corners of your rooms or slide it under the furniture. Works like a charm." -- E.T. in Michigan es with fewer than 50 full- and part-time workers are eligible for a loan of up to $75,000 with no payments due for the first six months.

Federal lawmakers are considering legislation to provide relief to Americans and businesses amid the pandemic. Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin on Tuesday said that could include cash payments to Americans.

The outbreak has led to long lines at area grocery stores and shortages of certain non-perishable food items and supplies like toilet paper on shelves. Stop & Shop announced it would change its hours of operation to 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. at most stores to give workers more time to stock shelves. Starting today (Thursday) Stop & Shop will allow those over the age of 60 to shop in store between 6 and 7:30 a.m.

As of Tuesday, nearly 185,000 cases of COVID-19 had been reported in 159 countries and territories since the outbreak began late last year in Wuhan, China, according to the World Health Organization. The disease has caused more than 7,500 deaths worldwide. The WHO declared the outbreak a pandemic on March 11.

The CDC on Tuesday reported 4,226 cases of COVID-19 in the United States. The virus had caused 75 deaths in the country.

Symptoms of COVID-19 include fever, cough, shortness of breath, and in severe cases, pneumonia.

Residents have been advised to take steps to stop the spread of the virus. They include avoiding large gatherings, frequent hand washing with soap and warm water for at least 20 seconds, covering your face when you cough or sneeze, and staying home when you are sick. Anyone who is ill is asked to contact their primary care provider for instructions before going to a clinic, office or emergency room.

It is not recommended that people wear masks when they are in public. Masks can be useful in some settings, such as a clinic waiting room, to prevent someone who has a respiratory illness from spreading it to others. There is no hard evidence that wearing a mask protects the wearer outside of the healthcare setting.

Quincy residents with questions can call the Mayor's Office of Constituent Services at 617-376-1500 or the Quincy Health Department at 617-376-1272. The state has also established a special 2-1-1 number for residents. More information is available online at cdc.gov and mass.gov.

SOCIAL DISTANCING:

What does it mean?

Social distancing is the practice of reducing close contact between people to slow the spread of infections or diseases. Social distancing measures include limiting large groups of people coming together, closing buildings and cancelling events.

Councillors Seek Progress Report On Animal Shelter, Dog Park

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors want a progress report on the city's efforts to build a new animal shelter and dog park on Quarry Street.

Councillors Anne Mahoney and Brian Palmucci on March 9 introduced a resolution, which was approved unanimously, seeking an update on those two projects. They asked that the information relative to those two projects be included as part of a larger update on projects being undertaken by the Department Natural Resources, which is expected at one of the council's next two meetings.

"The taxpayers deserve a timely update for this," Mahoney said during the council's March 9 meeting.

The council in 2017 approved a $27 million bond for various park improvement projects, which included $500,000 for the new dog park on Quarry Street. The city also received a $250,000 grant for the new park.

Later that same year, the council approved a $3.55 million bond to pay for the design of the new animal shelter, which will be located on the same parcel as the dog park. Koch had sought $7.1 million for the shelter, but councillors balked at fully funding the project before designs for the facility were complete.

Work on site, including construction of a new access road to reach both the dog park and shelter, began in 2018.

The dog park and animal shelter would be located on a 22-acre parcel of land the city owns that is adjacent to the Avalon Quincy development.
